2020

Accurate, Secure, Transparent

Thursday, May 14, 2020
Indiana State Library

Welcome

Welcome to Government Information Day 2020 at the Indiana State Library. Thank you to all returning attendees and welcome to all newcomers. GID 2020's theme is "Accurate, Secure, Transparent." Today is an opportunity for learning and cooperation among information professionals, librarians and government agencies.

This year, we are pleased to have speakers from the Indiana State Archives, the Benjamin Harrison Presidential Site, Purdue University Libraries and School of Information Studies, the Indiana Management Performance Hub, the Purdue Climate Change Research Center and the Indiana State Library. The combined in-depth knowledge of government information that these speakers possess is immeasurable, which will surely lead to insightful, astute and compelling presentations throughout the day.

I also would like to thank all of our speakers, exhibitors, volunteers and sponsors. It is with your efforts that we are able to put together such an outstanding event for everyone.

Again, thank you for attending Government Information Day. During your visit, be sure to explore our beautiful historic building, including the Indiana Young Readers Center and the Statehouse Education Center. I hope you enjoy your day with us at the Indiana State Library.

Legal Research Basics for Librarians

This presentation will help librarians answer legal research questions from patrons who are doing their own legal research, with an overview of different types of legal authority. Strategies and tools for finding state and federal statutes, regulations and case law will also be discussed. See a demonstration on how to use a variety of free websites to conduct legal research online. The session will conclude with tips on how to stick to conducting legal research and how to avoid providing legal advice. Presenter: Cheri Harris

Session 1-B: Indiana Authors Room 203

Harrison's Republic and the Spirit of Democracy

"An American citizen could not be a good citizen who did not have a hope in his heart." With this ringing invocation, the 23rd president called the United States of America to a higher purpose, and helped set it on course for the modern era. The Benjamin Harrison Presidential Site carries on this legacy in innovative, impactful and engaging ways.

Session 3-A: History Reference Room 211

Data.Census.gov

In March, the Census Bureau's data portal for the last few censuses, American FactFinder, ceased to exist. This means no more long lists of complicated geographies to sort through. This also means there is a brand new system to learn. The new dissemination platform is at Data.Census.gov. This session will demonstrate the new platform, including how to search for census data, view maps, filter searches and download and modify tables.

Presenter: Katie Springer

Session 3-B: Indiana Authors Room 203

What does climate change mean for Indiana? Sponsored by INDIGO

The ways we build our roads, manage our farms, move our water and use energy are all influenced by our unique Indiana climate. Our climate has been changing, and it will continue changing in ways that affect our productivity, our safety and our livelihoods. We need to know what climate change means for Indiana. Led by the Purdue Climate Change Research Center, the Indiana Climate Change Impacts Assessment provides the latest scientific research to help Hoosiers understand and prepare for the impacts of a changing climate. This presentation will feature results from the IN CCIA analysis.

Presenter: Melissa Widhalm
